

Australian Rock Art Research Association (AURA) and International Federation of Rock Art Organizations (IFRAO)

ROCK ART RESEARCH

Volume 25, Number 2

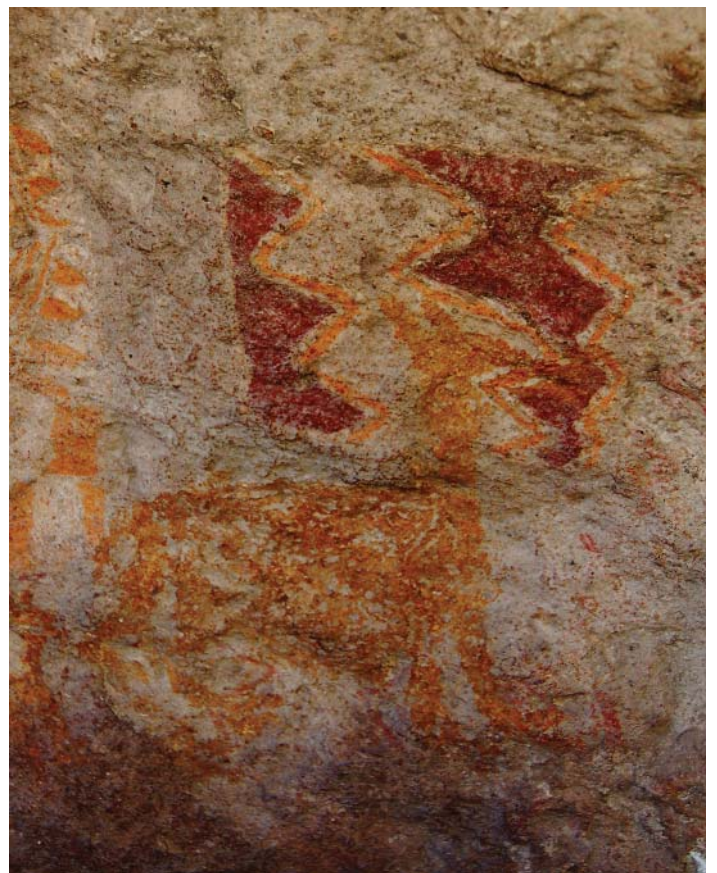

NOVEMBER 2008

Small anthropomorphs, Oqhotera site, at 4400 m altitude, Tantamaco Community, Macusani district, Peru.
One of over 200 sites under threat of destruction. (See article by R. Hostnig, pp. 229–233.)

Camelids and compositions called mantas (textiles). Detail of a panel in the Oqhoruni shelter, 4450 m altitude, Isivilla community, Corani district, Peru. (See article by R. Hostnig, pp. 229–233.)

Polychrome geometric compositions at the base of the Chisictara shelter, Juchuy Chilcuno canyon, Macusani district, Peru. (See article by R. Hostnig, pp. 229–233.)